Portrait of a Married Woman

By Samson Lederhendler

Heaven hid the book of fate from Eva Schwartz, and she cheerfully went under the bridal canopy with Joseph Margolis. There followed a few happy months, and then Joseph developed a penchant for gambling. Night after night he came home in the small hours and she waited for him in wretchedness. Her prayers to him to abandon his disagreeable course were bootless; the fascination of the gaming-table proved stronger than her pleas.

Eva now cherished the hope that when the child she was expecting arrived her husband's parental affection would lure him back to his home. Her hopes did not altogether disappoint her. The coming of the little son produced a great effect on Mr. Margolis. He began to come home right after business hours—he ran a small dry-goods store—and passed the evenings with his family. He enjoyed holding the new-born in his arms and fondling him, and in general conducted himself as young fathers usually do. Eva began to feel that the advent of the youngster brought her not only a son, but also a husband.

However, the novelty of little Abie (as the boy was called) grew tame after half a year, and Mr. Margolis' excitement-craving nature again veered to his gambling friends. Not that Joseph Margolis was a bad man at heart, but he was so constituted that the routine of daily work and quiet family life failed to keep him satisfied. The reaction of his backsliding on Eva was in a high degree depressive. Joseph earned a fair profit in his business, but only a meagre portion remained available for his home after his gambling expenditure was deducted.

"Joe," she pleaded with him, "I can't keep up the house on what you are handing me. And my clothes are all worn out, too. I haven't bought a new thing since we were married."

"Oh, there you're nagging me again," he growled. "I'm tired of that."

"And I'm tired of sitting alone the whole evening while you're away with your gang," she snapped.

Household bickerings became frequent with the Margolis, so that Eva saw her life fritter away in squabbles, worries and grief. Her health began to decline and her parents as well as his relatives appealed to her husband to mend his ways, but to no purpose. In the midst of these difficulties she gave birth to a second child—a girl—who was puny and sickly from the start and died in infancy.

Eva's heart was now embittered to the full; life was presenting its tragic aspects to her with unpitying grimness. As the measure of her suffering was filling up, she, in a moment of courage, decided to take heroic means to bring about a change in her position.

"Things can't go on longer this way, Joe," she said to him firmly one day. "I won't bear it any more."

"Why, what's ailing you?" he asked, sneeringly.

"Either you give me enough to live on," she continued, "or—"

"Or what?" he asked, as she had stopped abruptly.

"Or we'll separate!" she declared forcefully. "I'll go back to my parents. I refuse to live with a gambler!"

"That's a bright idea," he said, thinking she would not execute her threat.

A fortnight later, when Joseph Margolis came home three hours after midnight, he found the house deserted. Later, under threat of court proceedings, he agreed to pay for the maintenance of his wife and boy at her father's home.

Strange to say, Eva brightened up considerably under the new arrangement and her girlhood freshness and buoyancy returned in a measurable degree. With the removal of her daily humiliation and exasperating vexations, her spirits rebounded like a spring released from pressure. The year that succeeded the separation may be accounted one of the bright spots in Eva's chequered life.

One day Abie, who was now six years old, came from school with a bad cold, which in a few days developed into pneumonia. If his life was to be saved, the doctor said, he must needs have constant care and watchfulness; his father and mother now forgot their differences and kept alternate wakes over the sick-bed of their only child. Joseph was as anxious over Abie's recovery as Eva; together they whispered solicitous inquiries and busied themselves with medicinal ministrations. By imperceptible gradations they came nearer to each other, till at last their common hopes and fears forged a bond between them as strong as the bond of their courtship days. The day when Abie was pronounced out of danger was to them like the day of their betrothal, and while the boy slowly convalesced, they enjoyably occupied themselves with plans for building their disrupted home anew.

Eva now exacted from Joseph a solemn promise that he would cease gambling and he gave his pledge with all sincerity; then papa and mamma and fledgling returned to the deserted nest. The world holds nothing grander or sweeter than the reunion of a separated family, and the Margolis enjoyed a whiff of the Elysian fields. Month after month passed, during which Joseph continued to pass his leisure with his small family and apply his earnings to its support. Meantime baby Esther arrived to increase the family and its happiness.

There was an ingrained weak spot in Joseph's character, and after some fifteen months of home life his fondness for gambling reasserted itself. As sometimes happens with relapsed penitents, his latter end was worse than his beginning; it turned out that his temporary cessation from gambling had the effect of whetting his appetite for it. He abandoned himself to a veritable passion for card playing, losing substantial sums of money. In vain Eva multiplied her pleas and her reproaches; in vain her old father hunted Joseph out in his gambling resorts and in the presence of his crowd expostulated with him to spare his loyal wife and children. Joseph was obdurate; perhaps he was helpless in the grip of the vice.

Eva was now sorely perplexed as to her future course in life. She hated to break up their home again, especially as she shrank from being made the object of gossip. Her only guiding light in this quandary was the conviction that above all things she must look out for the welfare of her two children. After mature deliberation Eva came to the conclusion that the education and upbringing of her boy and girl could best be promoted if she preserved a conventional home and made the best of the situation.

From then on Eva found in her children the object of her existence; she lived vicariously in them.

When Abie reached his tenth year a new worry began to gnaw at his mother's heart. She wished her boy to receive a liberal education, to become a professional man; in fact, she had fixed her mind on his being a physician. She anticipated the time when he would be graduated from high school and ready to enter a medical college, and the question loomed up, distant yet pressing: Where would the tuition fees come from? Joseph, she knew too well, had no thought for the morrow and was not saving any money. After much debating with herself, according to her wont, she determined to broach the subject to her consort.

"Abie is growing up," she began, "and I've been thinking we ought to set aside a fund for his education."

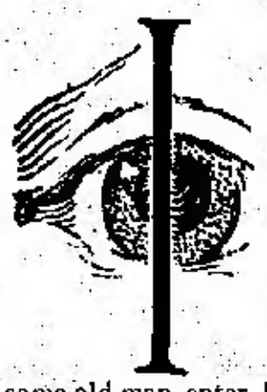
How I Became Farsighted

By GEORGES CLEMENCEAU

By Arrangement with "The American Hebrew."
Copyright by "The American Hebrew"



IT was three years ago I was quietly reading in my study when "M. Magnier" was announced. I thought that the editor of "L'Evènement" was calling on me and I ordered to admit him. The portière was raised and I saw a handsome old man enter, brisk and rosy, correct without exaggeration, and with an indescribable air of benign superiority. I did not know him. The face was handsomely framed in white whiskers, the gray eyes sparkled with amiable animation, his linen was dazzlingly white and a wide redingote gave him a sort of dignity. Altogether the impression disposed me in his favor I thought vaguely that he might be some foreign diplomat wishing to obtain information about France. The young man who accompanied my visitor was undoubtedly his secretary.

The stranger advanced with a kindly smile.

"I beg your permission," said he, familiarly, "not to remove my hat, for I fear nothing so much as a cold in the head.

Before I could reply, he deliberately planted upon his polished cranium a hat of high crown and wide brim. He took a seat, always with the same smile as of condescension. Evidently he wanted me to be at my ease. My face probably expressed some surprise. I waited for him to speak.

"Monsieur," said he, "I must first thank you for having received me. Still I am not at all surprised. My name opens all doors. When M. Mayer is announced, everybody knows what it means."

I could not suppress a little start, which did not escape my visitor.

"I see from your gesture that you know me," he continued, with a slight inflection of modesty. I was sure of it. General Baron de Z. and Marquise de X. said only this morning that I was the best-known man in Paris. But I have talked enough about myself. It is you whom my visit concerns. I have been waiting long to see you. All your friends have been telling me: 'Go and call on him. He is charming. He will be delighted to chat with you.' But you may know that I am very busy. Pardon me if I could not come any sooner."

I was disposed to pardon my surprising visitor when he brusquely exclaimed:

"Ah, but tell me, tell me frankly—how are you?"

Completely bewildered, without being able to account for my words, I stupidly replied:

"Oh, I am very well, thank you."

"Ah, monsieur," exclaimed my new friend with beaming face, "how glad I am to hear you say that! You know that your health is that of a man precious to France. It is fortunate that you are well. However, you must save your strength. I am sure that you are working too much. We have need of you."

Routed, dumbfounded, I listened to the flow of words, believing that there must be some misunderstanding, and awaited the end of the adventure.

In the meantime the affable old gentleman, radiant with the good news that I had given him, continued, without paying attention to my stupefaction.

"There is something I must tell you. What you must especially care for is your eyesight. There is nothing as precious. How can anybody work with weak eyes or with imperfect glasses? You are approaching the fifties. Your sight must be weakening. Be frank with me. Is there nothing the matter with your eyes?"

To tell the truth my sight had begun to grow weaker since a few months ago. But my visitor continued to annoy me. Finally I rose, replying drily:

"No, nothing. I see perfectly well."

"Ah, so much the better!" said my obstinate caller, remaining seated in his armchair. "Well, since you have good eyes, do take a glance at this treasure."

The hand from which he had stripped his glove flaunted before me the handsomest little Elzevir in the most elegant binding.

I had barely opened the book, when the man rose, placed his hand on my shoulder, and said with a note of affectionate reproach:

"Ah, you have deceived me! That is wrong. I would not have thought you capable of it. What? You tell me your sight is good, and you hold the book at a distance which proves to me that you are farsighted, terribly farsighted, sir. Your crystalline lens is flattening, that is all. But it is time to interfere. Well, well, why did you deceive me?"

I was as flattened as my crystalline lens, and very penitent, too, to have deceived so good a friend. I do not know what I might have said in apology, but I had no time to seek an excuse. Some instrument appeared before my eyes and before I had time to regain my composure my visual distance had been measured and the proof of my deceit was scientifically established.

"Number 2314," said the old gentleman with an air of authority to the secretary who had so effaced himself that I had forgotten his presence.

The words were barely pronounced when the young man lifted a flat box which, on entering, he had placed on the floor, and displayed before my eyes an array of glasses, the moving reflections of which filled the room with dancing lights.

FEDERATION CAMPAIGN

On Sunday, December the 24th, the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies will let loose on the city of Toronto a host of canvassers who will interview several thousand people with a view of securing 2,000 new subscribers for the Federation. These canvassers are Jewish business men of the city, who are themselves subscribers to the Federation. They are giving of their time: will you Mr. Non-Subscriber reciprocate with a subscription? The canvassers who have given of their money and are now also giving of their time deserve a courteous reception and a respectful hearing. They are coming to see you, Mr. Non-Subscriber, on behalf of the Jewish poor, the sick, the orphaned and the widows, the undeveloped boy and girl who are blood of your blood. The winter is already making unusual demands on the Federation for the support of your needy. The Jewish poor are too proud to beg, and the Jewish community is also too proud to expect the non-Jewish charitable agencies of the city to be compelled to support our poor because many of our people are derelict in their duty.

The Federation to-day has an income of some $53,000 a year, which is contributed by 800 subscribers. Many of these subscribers, when appealed to several months ago, to increase their annual contribution to the Federation, did so. In spite of business reverses, which our subscribers have suffered in the last year, many are continuing to pay the annual sums they subscribed in the prosperous years.

It is a public disgrace that in a Jewish community as large as ours, the Federation should have only 800 paying subscribers. There are hundreds and hundreds of small Jewish merchants and workers with good steady salaries, who are not members of the Federation. It is to these that this special appeal is directed.

In the Federation supplement to this edition of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW you will find an account of how the Federation spends its money. Read it carefully. There, too, you will find a list of names of Toronto's Jews, who possess the true Jewish spirit of charity. Is your name on this list? If not, why? Remember that after all is said and done you have your conscience to answer to. Nobody, so say the Jewish sages, ever gets poorer through giving charity. The secret to success is to give to the full measure that your income will allow. Don't save at the expense of the poor. The Jewish poor of this city stretch out their hands to you—appealing for aid. Do not deny them a brother's assistance. Help the campaign for 2,000 new subscribers to Federation to go over the top.

"A BETTER ZIONIST THAN MOST ZIONISTS"

Concluded from last week

The possibilities of land investment are known in such enterprises as that of Tel-Aviv, founded in 1909 by 60 members of a Zionist building association. A piece of neglected land was purchased, a short distance from the coast near Jaffa. This settlement, after the conquest of its first difficulties, has grown into the most beautiful town in Palestine. It has to-day about 1,000 houses and more than 10,000 inhabitants. It has good streets, electric lights and a modern water supply. It has the rights of a full municipality. A beautiful avenue connects the town with the shore, where bathing pavilions have been established. All this is the work of Zionists.

Palestine is a country which is still being prepared for the immigrant, and it is symptomatic of the new state of affairs that this preparation is going on steadily. The principal instruments at work in this task of preparation are those supplied by the Zionists. In a country where capital was scarce and badly needed, the Zionists have set up two mortgage banks—not gigantic institutions, but small and efficient organizations, doing limited work, but doing it well.

The Zionists maintain schools where more than 13,000 children, Arabs and Jews, are educated. The Zionists are now gathering funds for a great Hebrew University to be situated on the Mount of Olives. Within the last year the Keren Hayesod (Palestine Foundation Fund) and the Jewish National Fund have spent $3,000,000 in the country. Half a million has gone to education, half a million to sanitation, half a million to establishing colonists, and more than half a million to helping immigrants.

There are further projects of a larger number. Palestine is handicapped by the lack of coal and by lack of irrigation. The Rutenberg scheme, sponsored and supported by Zionists, which envisages the harnessing of the waters of the Jordan for the production of electrical power, has been sanctioned by the British Government, and the concession granted on condition that work be begun within three years. There is enough potential power available to furnish industrial power for home consumption and irrigation for the whole country.

The Palestinian peasant has been accustomed to very low standards of living. His children receive no education, and his family, impressed early into the farm work, live without the elementary comforts of life. Jews who first entered the agricultural field were compelled to adopt the same standards, but conditions have been improving through the encouragement and assistance of the Zionist organization. The Jews brought new methods into the country. They introduced the cultivation of the vine, as well as eucalyptus, orange and almond plantations. Their exports of fine wines, oranges and almonds amount to huge sums.

It must never be forgotten that Great Britain entered into a contract with the Jewish people which is not by any means one-sided in its benefits. Britain has interests in Egypt, the Suez Canal and India. Every statesman in Great Britain admits that Palestine is absolutely essential and strategically necessary for the protection of Egypt and the Suez Canal. What better friends can England have in Palestine than the Jews, whose loyalty to Britain and British ideals is proverbial. On the other hand, the Jews need a homeland and Palestine is that land. The Jews have no better friends than the English. The contract between England and the Jews in re Palestine is based on mutual confidence and we hope nothing and nobody will succeed in disrupting this friendship.

England's power and influence in the East has brought her enemies. These enemies the Bishop is unwittingly aiding. They work under different and several guises. In one guise they stir up trouble in India, in another they brew animosity in Egypt, whilst in still another they create dissension in Palestine. To these enemies of Britain and the Jew we commend the following excerpt from the address of Earl Balfour, delivered at the session of the League of Nations, which ratified the British mandate for Palestine:

> "I cannot conclude without earnestly appealing to those friends and countrymen of mine who have taken an interest in this question (Palestine), although they have been in opposition to the points of view I have advocated. You will remember that while discussion and opposition may have been legitimate—vas in a free country perhaps they were—while the scheme was in the making, a man cannot but feel if he looks at the matter soberly, that he has committed a great crime if now that a settlement has been arrived at, he endeavors to feed the animosities only too liable to spring up at this moment, not only in Palestine, but in every part of the world between men of every race, religion, language, and different historic pasts. That is the cause under which all the world is suffering at this moment, and any man without the least prospect of reaching material success, who does use his influence to increase these evils and to feed these controversies, is really committing a great crime against a civilization which is struggling and struggling with great difficulty against devices, conflicts, mutual apprehension and mutual dangers which, if the world does not succeed in suppressing, will endanger the civilization of the future."

That for what it cost me to be free

Guardians of the public morals are now after old Ben Hecht, our co-religionist of Chicago, who wrote "Eric Dorn," "Gargoyles" and "Fantazius Mallare," and because of the last-named became the dearest recent anxiety of those censors who read a book, are too mean to admit that they enjoyed it and then turn around and try to tell others what they should not read. Men like John S. Sumner of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice (how the gods must laugh whenever he is paged) do at least one thing when they set out to censor a book that they had no intention of doing—they increase its circulation so that it is a lucky author, indeed, who comes within their notice.

It must be more than disinterested interest which prompted Harvard University to issue a questionnaire that required not only the name of new students but their former names if they had been changed. We hold no brief for what Harvard is doing but we can't resist a sardonic smile when we think of the many Jewish names that have been truncated, slashed and made unrecognizable in the mad race toward others that provide their owners with what they believe is a sort of protective coloration. Of this Maurice Samuel says in "The New Palestine":

The situation has, heaven knows, its serious side. But the unassimilated Jew, who carries in his knapsack some of the bitter humor of his forefathers, must permit himself to smile.

"Name, please."

Haughtily: "Philip van Kelsteen."

"Father's name, please."

Haughtily: "The same."

"Was your father's name ever anything else?"

A confused pause: "Er—yes." Stammering: "I don't know how to pronounce it."

"Well, write it, please."

Several editions ago the Toronto Sunday World published a rotogravure page of etchings. Among them was one of the Holy Blossom Synagogue. In one corner could be seen two women with shawls over their heads and a supposedly Hebraic gentleman with his derby pulled down on his ears. In this day and age! The artist couldn't have visited the scene at shul-going time, at least not in this decade. If he had there would have been automobiles in the foreground instead of shawls and a derby. If this sort of ignorance were not pathetic it would be as amusing as the Toronto reporter who nearly lost his hearing when he realized that sermons were preached in English at Holy Blossom Synagogue; or the reporter on the "Ingersoll Daily Sentinel Review" who wrote that Rabbi Brickner, in an address to the local Kiwanis Club, spoke "with only the slighest trace on some words of his native accent." It would be interesting to know just what the reporter thought that native accent was, except American.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said: "I could be a poet if I wanted to"? No, nor a woman either. This particular form of blight descends on nearly all alike, something like the desire young girls have to be nurses at some time or other. This is the reason that such newspapers as the Canadian Jewish Review do not print "poetry" by local talent. If they did they would have room for nothing else, not even advertising—especially in spring.

"A dispatch from Chicago relates that when M. Clemenceau visited the Art Institute in that city, one day last week, he was shown a gold-lacquered shrine in which sat a bronze figure of Buddha.

"Ah, poor Buddha!" Clemenceau sighed; "he never said he was a God, but always said he was a man. But when he died they made a God of him."

The careful student of history, who knows what has gone on in the world during the last two thousand years, knows full well that Buddha is not the only one who has been treated that way. But that is another Geschichte."

HERZL ZION CLUB

Chanukah was celebrated in a fitting manner at the Herzl Zion Club last Sunday evening. Samuel Gordon, a club member, opened the evening by the symbolical lighting and "benching" of the candles and singing of appropriate selections. Rabbi Brickner, the speaker of the evening, reminded the club of its obligations as a Zionist organization, and appealed for their aggressive assistance in the coming Keren Hayesod campaign. Dr. Brickner also voiced an appeal on behalf of the Federation and the new Boys' Club on Simcoe Street.

The president, A. C. Soloman, pledged the assistance of the club in all Zionist endeavors, and pointed out its past activities on behalf of Zionism and communal work. Mr. Snider read several selections from the humorous works of Sholem Aleichem.

The club's annual stag will take place on Sunday evening, December 21, with an unsurpassed program of entertainment. This year's event is in charge of the athletic committee and among the features arranged for will be a private showing of a pre-release. Benny Gould, challenger for the junior featherweight championship of the world, in an exhibition bout; Sol Lewis and Jack Samuel, of Gallagher & Shean fame, in "Something Different"; a well-known down-town jazz band in "Syncopated Melodies"; and a host of other features too numerous to mention. A special attraction will be the "Entertainers," in a melange of jazz. This affair is for members and their friends, and accommodation will be at a premium. The club announces the inauguration of "gym" nights on Monday and Wednesday, with Manny Stone in charge.

YOUNG JUDAEA

All the young Judaeans attended last Saturday night the Chanukah entertainment at the Zionist Institute. The festivities included a program and dancing. Rabbi Julius Siegal, who was among the guests, urged the members to become good Jews and active Zionists. Jewish boys and girls are the hope of the existence of Judaism and it is for them to carry on the Jewish ideal and culture, in spite of any disheartening persecution, he said.

Rabbi Brickner Addresses Herzl Zion Club

During the Chanukah week, Rabbi Brickner, in his capacity as President of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, presided at the opening ceremonies and dedication of the new Jewish Children's Home.

On Sunday evening, Rabbi Brickner addressed the Herzl Zion Club in their club-rooms. He urged them to affiliate themselves with Jewish work and required of them to place themselves in the service of the Zionist Organization for the coming Keren Hayesod campaign and for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto in their forthcoming campaign for 2,000 new members, and to interest themselves in the work of the Jewish Big Brother Association for cutting down delinquency amongst Jewish boys and giving the underprivileged Jewish boy a good start in life.

CONGREGATIONAL

HOLY BLOSSOM HEBREW CONGREGATION, BOND STREET

Friday evening, December 22, at 8.15: "Why Judaism Did Not Become the World Religion" or "How a Jewish Heresy Developed into a New Faith."

Sabbath morning services at 10.15. Text of Rabbi Brickner's sermon will be: "Joseph Made Himself Known unto His Brethren" (Gen. xlv,-1)

A large attendance of members and their families listened to last Friday evening's lecture on "Can We Assimilate with the World and Remain Jews?" After the lecture the congregation adjourned to the beautifully renovated synagog chambers for a reception arranged by the Temple Sisterhood. Rabbi Brickner, on behalf of the Congregation, thanked the Sisterhood and particularly Mrs. Jules Heim and Misses Minnie and Clara Kallmeyer for their splendid work in renovating the synagog chambers. A genuine transformation has taken place. Rabbi Brickner explained that the synagog chambers would be used not merely for the religious school, but would now be available for the Sisterhood, Temple Center and Junior Society to hold their socials, dances, plays, etc. It is hoped that the synagog chambers will develop into a real center for the social activities of the Congregation, which have now grown extensively. Following Rabbi Brickner's remarks, refreshments were served. It is the intention of the Sisterhood to arrange for a reception social to be held one Friday evening a month.

Chanukah Entertainment

Seven hundred children of the three religious schools of the Congregation enjoyed the beautiful Chanukah entertainment at the Strand Theatre on Yonge Street. The program was in charge of the superintendent of the schools, Mr. E. F. Singer, who is also Honorary Secretary of the Congregation. The program consisted of the lighting of the Chanukah candles by Rabbi Brickner, followed by a short address. Two entertaining moving pictures were shown. A ventriloquist and magician helped to further entertain the children. A large number of the parents were also present and enjoyed the program. A box of candies for each child was provided by the special committee of the Sisterhood, convenor of which is Mrs. Harry Marks.

Temple Center

A meeting of the executive was held last Sunday morning, called by Mr. Mark Cohen, President of the Center. The activities of the Center have been dormant, owing to the fact that the synagog chambers were under renovation. It is the plan to re-organize the Temple Center along new lines early in January.

Junior Society

The Junior Society is composed of about one hundred members of the Collegiate Department of the religious school. The first social affair of the Society will be a dance in the synagog chambers on Saturday evening, December 23rd. The committee in charge is making elaborate preparations for an enjoyable affair for the young people. Patrons will be Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Singer, Rabbi and Mrs. Brickner and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Marks.

Choir

The choir of the Congregation, under the leadership of Dr. Gutzeit, has been recently augmented. There is still need for additional choristers. Young ladies with soprano and alto voices are afforded an opportunity for choir service and voice training. Dr. Gutzeit, College 7812, will be pleased to receive applicants for the choir.

CONGREGATION GOEL TZEDEK
University Ave. Synagog.
Sabbath Services

The Friday evening services will commence at 4.45 and the Saturday morning services will commence at 9 o'clock. There will be no sermon as it is probable that Rabbi Siegel will stay with his parents at Chicago over Saturday.

Religious School Chanukah Festival

A fine Chanukah entertainment was given to the children of Goel Tzedek Religious School by the Women's Auxiliary. More than three hundred children, all of them registered at the school, filled the beautifully decorated hall and enjoyed themselves immensely. Rabbi Siegel opened the program by an address on the holiday. Then Mr. Kelly, the well-known ventriloquist, entertained the children by a very humorous performance with his dummies. The feature of the program was a Chanukah playlet entitled, "What's To-Night?" by the Ruth girls. The cast was excellent and gave a most entertaining performance. Rabbi Siegel thanked Miss Fisher who directed the play and the entire cast for their kindness on behalf of the school. The Religious School Committee of the Women's Auxiliary then distributed boxes of candy to all the children assembled and presented the teachers of the school with Chanukah gifts. The lady teachers received boxes of chocolates and the men teachers boxes of cigars. Mrs. Siegel spoke to the children on behalf of the committee and M. A. Smith replied on behalf of the teachers. Before closing Rabbi Siegel tendered the thanks of the school to the committee, which worked under the able convenorship of Mrs. Selig for the beautiful decoration of the hall and for the goodies distributed among the children.

"Business Before Pleasure," by Montague Glass, will be presented in England shortly, with York and Adams, who sailed this week to play the roles created here by Bernard and Carr. At the conclusion of an English tour, the play will be sent to South America with the same stars.

Her husband stared glumly.

"I think," she continued weakly, "he ought to be a doctor."

"Let him be a professor, for anything I care," he remarked.

"Yes," she proceeded, "but what about financing his education?"

"Well, if that isn't just like you, to borrow trouble ten years ahead!" he cried at last. "Look here, wifey, I don't know what Abie is going to be when he grows up. All I know is that I have my hands full to make ends meet without laying by funds, as you call it."

Eva perceived the uselessness of further arguing the point, but in her heart she clung to the idea of providing for Abie's education nevertheless. At length she thought out a plan for realizing her object without her husband's help or knowledge. Scanty as was the amount Joseph allowed her for household expenses, she resolved to withdraw a pittance from it every week and thus accumulate a fund. It would be a difficult task, necessitating stringent self-denial, but Eva was of the type that delights in self-sacrifice; indeed, are there any privations that a Jewish mother will flinch from, when the goal is the education of her son?

Eva then started to economize severely in every feasible way, depositing the result of her frugality, in a savings bank. It was her delight to see the small sums mount up and visualize to her eyes her son's diploma. She would figure in advance how much her savings and the bank interest would sum up on a certain date and all the time she would almost experience the gloating joy of a miser fingering his hoard. As the years passed and Abie entered high school her secret fund began to assume respectable proportions.

While thus far-sightedly providing the material wherewithal for Abie's advanced education she exercised exacting supervision over the progress of his studies. Like a martinet she constantly drove him to take painstaking care of his lessons and to stint no time for study. If his report card from high school showed a bad mark she flared up and reprimanded him with unremitting severity. She never told the boy of her secret savings or of her ambitious plans for him, but she felt confident that when he was at length launched on his professional career he would appreciate what his mother had done for him.

Joseph Margolis, on the other hand, maintained an attitude of easy-going fondness for his son, often petted him, never bothered him about school or spoke harshly to him and was more like an elder brother than a father to him. As was natural under the circumstances, Abie was very warmly attached to his father and was afraid of his mother.

In due course the great day came when Abie was graduated from high school. The lad himself was not half so proud and happy as his mother was. The moment had now arrived when she must confide to Abie the story of her long and secret saving and impart to him the tidings that there was no pecuniary obstruction in his path to a professional career. With a soft maternal light in her eyes she began in a confidential tone:

"Abie, my boy, you are now nearly eighteen years of age and a high school graduate. It's time you were thinking of your future."

"What do you mean, ma?" rather sleepily, from Abie.

"I mean, Abie dear, that we ought to consider how you will some day earn a living and make your way in the world."

"Oh, pa told me all about it," said Abie, with complete unconcern.

"Pa told you!" his mother cried amazedly, for she had never divulged a syllable of her scheme to her husband. "Why, what did your pa tell you?"

"He told me I'm going into the dry-goods business with him," drawled Abie in a tired voice.

"Oh, fudge! Dry-goods business! I should say not!" she cried heatedly.

"You are not going into the dry-goods business," affirmed his mother, determinedly. "You're going to study and be a doctor."

"Doctor me eye!" retorted Abie, querulously. "I'd much rather get into the dry-goods line. I don't want to be a pulse-feeler and I hate to study. I've done all the studying I ever intend to do."

Eva was dismayed. The possibility of such a situation had never occurred to her, and it upset all her calculations.

"That comes from your pa's meddling," she protested angrily. "He's a gambler; he has no ambition for himself and none for you."

"Please, ma, don't insult my father," said Abie, who sincerely loved his father. "You're always picking on pa. He's a good father and a good husband to you. What if he does play cards? Lots of people do. What a fuss you make about it!"

"A good father!" the long-suffering woman almost yelled. "A good gambler, he is. Why, he's out gambling every single night."

"I don't think it's all pa's fault," said Abie sullenly. "You're always harrying and nagging him as long as I remember, so he can't stay in the house."

Eva was completely baffled and felt like weeping.

"But, Abie dear," she said with tears in her eyes, "I've saved up two thousand dollars out of the meagre sums your pa gives me for household expenses with the hope that it would carry you through college. It's a profound secret. Your pa doesn't know anything about it."

"You save money unknown to pa! Now I see why we're always living so poorly," Abie cried with juvenile triumph. "Papa gives you enough money, but you don't spend it on the house."

"Just think, Abie," she said in a tremulous voice, "how nice it will be when you're a doctor."

"There's lots of doctors don't make a living," declared Abie, knowingly. "I'd hate to be a doctor. Papa promised to take me into the dry-goods store, and I'd sure love to be a business man."

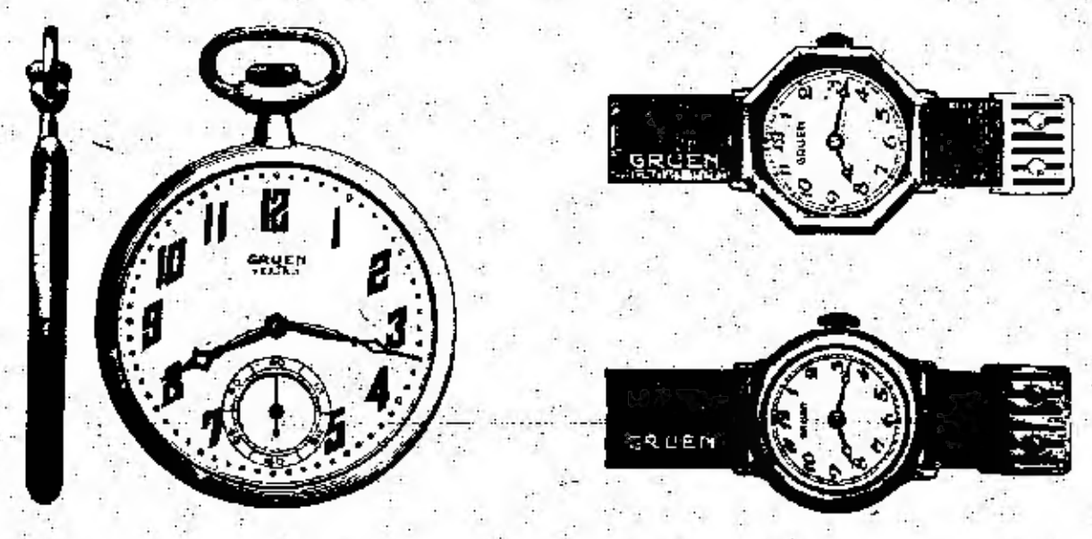
Poor Eva was too overcome for further words. It was bitter to have her boy turn against her and spurn her years of privation and self-denial. She felt as Cain did when the Lord refused to accept his offering. To think that her own Abie had deserted her and gone over to her lifelong foe, her husband! To think that after all the hardships she underwent for Abie's sake he should espouse his father's cause against her! These were rankling thoughts.

There was only one thing left, she said to herself, and that was to bring up her daughter Esther to sympathize with her and she must lose no time about it. She would at once start to train up her little daughter to take her own point of view and be on her mother's side all the time. And maybe she could use her savings for Esther's education.

Wearily she faced the prospect of beginning anew.—(American Hebrew.)

Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt has signed a contract with representatives of the principal Jewish congregations of Philadelphia, requiring him to sing on the three Jewish high holidays in each of the years 1923, 1924 and 1925. Mr. Rosenblatt is to receive $15,000 a year for his services.

Max Epstein, a ten-year-old violinist living in Los Angeles, Cal., is a lucky lad. For W. A. Clark of the same city recently heard him play and became so interested in the boy that he presented him with a genuine Andzig violin and volunteered to look after the boy's future musical training.



For his art a guildsman spurned
Great Catherine's gold

THERE is a tale of an old-time guildsman who held his craft more precious than a purse of gold, more binding than the wish of any foreign monarch. Creating a watch so small that it fitted into a ring, he bore it to George the Third, who bestowed upon the maker five hundred guineas and his thanks. Catherine the Great had news of the unique masterpiece, and offered the young artisan a purse of a thousand guineas for another like it. But he refused. Striving always for greater perfection in each new watch, he was loath to halt his art to make a duplicate.

Such to-day is the spirit of progress which guides the hands of the modern Gruen Guild craftsmen. Devoted to their guild and craft, content with naught less than perfection in their watches, these men have lent to the name Gruen a prestige unsurpassed in any age. It is to these guildsmen, therefore, that the men and women of America turn for the highest examples of the progressive art of watchmaking.

We will be glad to have you examine our distinctive display of Gruen Guild Watches while our stock is most complete.

How I Became Farsighted

I said nothing more, as if crushed by my irreparable defeat. I gave myself up to his mercy. My authoritative benefactor, disclaiming to abuse his victory, and treating me like an inert object, without a word placed a pair of eyeglasses on my nose. Oh, miracle! I read the Elzevir without any trouble. The type seemed to be of admirable clearness. The veil which had for some time troubled my sight, without my being conscious of it, seemed to be lifting. I could not conceal my satisfaction. My generous friend enjoyed his modest triumph.

"These lenses are nowhere on sale," said he. "I manufacture them myself. I spent half of my life in computing their thickness and their curvature. They are priceless, for unlike others, they do not fatigue the eyes. It is a revolution that I have made. I can call myself a benefactor of humanity. Your gratitude for the service I have rendered you will increase with your age. I venture proudly the prediction: You will never forget M. Mayer."

Truly this devil of a man had rendered me a service and I could not disguise my contentment.

"I must leave you," said he brusquely. "You are satisfied with me, that is all I care for. I have an operation to perform at Colonel X's, who expects me."

It would have been sheer egotism to make the colonel wait. M. Mayer, who had not removed his hat, now touched it lightly with his right hand and then, pointing to the pair of eyeglasses on the corner of the table, concluded in an offhand manner:

"Their price is only forty francs."

"Oh, never!" said I, recovering my lost energy. "That is too much by half."

"Well, well," said M. Mayer, "I know better than you what they cost me, since I make them myself. I alone, do you understand? I had thought you incapable of disputing such a trifle, when I rendered you this great service."

He did not conclude. He was evidently suffering from my meanness and his pity spared me. I was at that moment ashamed of having protested. With a gesture of injured benevolence, he said in a low voice:

"We'll let it go at thirty francs. I am in a hurry."

Since that day I am farsighted.

Should I add that, having broken one of the lenses of M. Mayer's eyeglasses, I easily replaced it with one that cost me forty sous?

Oh, race, vilified by the whole world, what Aryan could ever compete with you?

Federation Campaign for two thousand new members is under way.

Read the following. It will convince you what the Federation is doing.

Every Jew who is able, should be a subscriber to the Federation. ¶Please refer all needy families coming to your attention to the Federation. ¶Remember we cannot help everybody adequately if you don't help us.

FAMILY WELFARE BOARD

FROM Nov. 1, 1921, to Nov. 1, 1922, the Family Welfare Board assisted 150 families, representing 801 residents of Toronto and 90 strangers in our midst, and spent for actual relief during the year, $33,206.86.

The causes of poverty were as follows: Sickness, old age, widowhood, desertion, unemployment and insufficient earnings.

The amount expended on each family last year ranged from $150.00 to $800.00.

The Family Welfare Board works in co-operation with the Boot and Shoe Society and the Sewing Circle of the Council of Jewish Women. Last year the former supplied hundreds of pairs of boots and shoes, while the latter provided garments of all kinds to those in need.

To carry on constructive relief work, the Family Welfare Board should have a great deal more money at its command.

Last year the Boafd re-established 37 families. With more funds, we could extend this work of helping people to help themselves.

$50,000 is needed for this work.

ORPHANS' HOME

THE old Orphanage on Simcoe Street was found to be entirely inadequate to cope with the problems of neglected and dependent children. As a result, it became necessary to move into larger quarters. The new home, located on Annette Street, will have all the facilities for a real children's home. It is the pride of the Toronto Jewish community.

During the last year, the Orphans' Home cared for 51 children. Federation contributed $9,682.10 towards their maintenance.

The new home will accommodate 60 children and requires $6,000 additional to carry on in their new and enlarged quarters.

THE MATERNITY AID

LADIES' Maternity Aid Society grants relief to those who are about to become mothers.

Mothers are cared for from one to two months before child-birth and one or two months after the child comes. The relief is in the form of pre-natal care, of added nourishment, such as eggs, milk, etc., and a woman to help in the housework. Frequently babies, whose mothers require hospital treatment or who otherwise are unable to give sufficient care to them, are cared for by the organization. A physician, nurse and hospital treatments are also provided for mothers whenever necessary.

The Maternity Aid is also engaged in child welfare work and provides eye-glasses for needy school children coming under the notice of the organization.

Last year 84 mothers were served in addition to the child welfare work, all of which required an expenditure of $1,800.00.

At least $4,000.00 will be needed to take proper care of the work of the Maternity Aid Society with its increasing Child Welfare activities for next year. Show that you are ready to assist expectant Jewish mothers who happen to be the victims of adversity.

BIG BROTHER AND SISTER MOVEMENT

JEWS everywhere pride themselves on being a law-abiding and orderly people, yet Toronto allows an undue proportion of Jewish arraignments in the Children's Court. All efforts are being bent toward developing an agency that will carry out a program of preventive work broad enough to cope with the problem.

There are at present two organizations in the Jewish community doing work with delinquent children. The Jewish Big Brother Movement undertakes the work with delinquent boys, while the Big Sister Committee of the Council of Jewish Women carries on a similar work with the Jewish girls. The Big Brothers have one paid worker, and the Big Sisters conduct all their work with volunteers.

To make a home for boys, who otherwise would roam the streets and get into all sorts of mischief, the old Orphanage on Simcoe Street is being renovated into a Boys' Club, where the underprivileged boys will find recreation in the form of reading, athletics and good companionship.

Last year 163 boys came up before the Juvenile Court, and $1,500.00 was spent in the work. With the new Boys' Club $4,000.00 will be required to carry on this splendid work.

PERSONAL SERVICE

OF the men who leave their families ostensibly to find work, some never intend to return. They are plain deserters, turning their backs shamelessly upon responsibility. Time was when wife and child abandonment was a thing unheard of in the Jewish community. To-day it is a common occurrence.

The Personal Service Department is making every effort to apprehend wife and child deserters and to settle domestic troubles. Just recently this department was instrumental in interesting the United States and Canadian Governments to deport a wife and child deserter from the United States to Canada. Our Personal Service Department is also correspondent for the various philanthropic agencies throughout the United States and Canada. Every effort is made to induce those who are able, to assume the responsibility of their poor relatives, thus saving the Federation thousands of dollars every year. The Personal Service Department has, in various ways, served 122 families. This department also gives legal aid to those who cannot afford to hire counsel and intercedes where it is morally justified either in behalf or against an offender.

The Federation, through this department, helped in the re-organization of the Toronto branch of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society which gives advice and help in this field.

The cost of maintaining a personal service department last year amounted to $3,861.00. To carry on this important work more effectively $5,000.00 will be required.

FRESH AIR CAMPS

DURING the summer of 1922, the Federation assisted in the operation of three camps. One was conducted by the Junior Council, affiliated with the Federation, at the Whitby Cottage for junior girls. This camp accommodates about ninety children each season and has been in existence for six years. The camp is supported entirely by the Federation. With more funds this camp could be extended to accommodate two hundred children.

The second camp was conducted near the Rifle Ranges, along the Hamilton Highway, by a special Boys' Camp Committee. This camp has been in existence the third season and accommodated 250 boys last summer. It was supported by volunteer donations with the co-operation and assistance of the Federation.

The third camp was conducted at Bronte, for mothers and babies, by the Maternity Aid Society, an organization affiliated with the Federation. The camp was in charge of a trained nurse, and volunteers. Forty-two mothers and eighty-six children were accommodated there last season. The Family Welfare Board of the Federation co-operated with the Maternity Aid in this work. The camp was supported entirely by volunteer subscriptions.

It is advisable that more money be available for these camps. Your subscription will help the Federation to co-operate more effectively in this laudable work.

THE JEWISH GIRLS' CLUB

TOO much stress cannot beputupon the importance of the work performed by this Club. Every girl who takes part in its activities means a girl employing her leisure evenings usefully instead of going to questionable dance halls, or living in a state of loneliness.

The activities of the Jewish Girls' Club include classes in English, Citizenship, Cooking, Dressmaking, Typewriting, Physical Culture, Knitting and Embroidery. Points of interest are visited frequently, such as the art museum, concerts are attended and walks taken into the country. The weekly social dances attract hundreds who enjoy a pleasant evening in the most wholesome surroundings.

Sunday evening concerts, a special feature of the club, are attended by both girls and boys.

The attendance last year was 10,320—8,497 girls and 1,841 boys. This represents an increase over the previous year to the extent of 4,241.

The Jewish Girls' Club is a most necessary and important feature in the life of our Jewish young women. Everything must be done to maintain its helpful influence in the lives of young Jewry in Toronto.

Last year $2,400.00 was spent to accomplish the above. With the new quarters on St. George Street, wherein even greater scope is presented to the Club, $3,500.00 will be required.

THE HEBREW FREE BURIAL SOCIETY CHESED SHEL EMETH

The Hebrew Burial Society provides free and decent burial to those of our poor who die and who, but for this society, would go to the common free burial ground.

This society takes care of the poor to the comfort of their living, who cannot take care of the burial themselves. Be a friend in that house visited by death.

The present cemetery is now filled and a new cemetery ground is needed. Money is wanted with which to purchase a new resting abode. For this purpose alone Federation will need $2,000.

CO-OPERATING WITH NON-JEWISH ORGANIZATIONS

WE cannot separate ourselves from the community and confine our activities to our own circle. As citizens, we must interest ourselves in the same social and civic problems as our non-Jewish neighbors. Health, sanitation, housing, delinquency, child welfare and other social and civic problems are the concern of every good citizen regardless of creed. The co-operation between our organization and the Board of Health, The Mothers' Allowance Commission, Juvenile Court, Social Service Departments of the various hospitals, Neighborhood Workers' Association, and other non-Jewish private and public institutions is indispensable, in order to bring beneficial results to those we are called upon to assist.

During the last year, we have co-operated with the Mothers' Allowance Board, in a large number of cases of widows who receive a monthly allowance from the Province of Ontario, thus saving the Federation thousands of dollars a year. This co-operation has proved of great help to our organization as well as to the Mothers' Allowance Commission. We understand our own people better than the non-Jewish worker, and we can present their needs more effectively. But if we expect these organizations and institutions to rely upon our judgment and co-operation, we must have trained social workers.

CONCLUSION

You who have never failed in the past, must keep alive those noble and spiritual traditions for which an entire PEOPLE are known the world over. Never has the need been greater, the task more urgent. Sacrifice, personal sacrifice, is perhaps one of the prices all of us will be called upon to pay at a time when the troubled universe has cause to count its pennies.

This fund to which you contribute, means the splendid carrying-on of a very beautiful cause. Every dollar buys hope, faith, courage, even life itself, for the needy, the less fortunate. Fate's inexorable pendulum swings back and forth, back and forth, ceaselessly.

Its present hour of marking points definitely to that which is perhaps less a charity than a privilege. And we need YOU—your encouragement, your moral support, your financial aid. All through the ravages of cruel winter, the hours of suffering, of heartache, your hand will be reaching out to stiffen the morale of your less fortunate brethren, will be feeding the hungry and nursing the sick; the murmured prayers of little children will sound in your ears; you will have done an ennobling thing.

In the above columns you have read an outline of the various activities of Federation. Re-read every page and you will appreciate how necessary it is to have more money to carry on this work. Remember the Jewish people in every community have always cared for their own poor. Toronto Jewry must and will live up to this honourable tradition.

has done more to enlighten the public to its needs and to bring about social legislation than any other Agency.

Federation is the concentration of an entire community in an organized effort for charitable and philanthropic endeavour, for the general good and benefit of all. It does away with duplication and waste, thereby bringing to the beneficiary of charity the full measure of the community's support.

The Arabs and the Jews are racial cousins. They have much in common. Even our enemies admit this. Great Britain has established an Arab kingdom in Mesopotamia in which the great bulk of Arabs live contentedly. The coming of the Jews to Palestine is a blessing to the Arabs economically, politically and educationally. Nothing is, nor can be done to jeopardise the Arab rights or claims. The present disturbances are due to malicious propaganda and misunderstanding which there is not the slightest doubt will pass away when the time of nervous, abnormal, post-war excitation is over. The Arabs and Jews can and will work peaceably together for the general good and upbuilding of the country.

We agree with the Bishop that all of us should pray that truth, justice and fair play should dictate the terms upon which the new Jerusalem will be founded.

CHANUKAH AT WESTON SANITARIUM

A joyous Chanukah treat was given the children of the Weston Sanitarium by the Weston Sanitarium Club last week. Rabbi Siegel gave the children a talk on Chanukah, explaining the historic importance of the lighting of candles. The ladies then visited the patients. The committee of the Club wishes to express their thanks to all who assisted in making this celebration a success. The Weston Sanitarium Club will hold their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Pasternak, 227 University Avenue, Tuesday, January 9. The Club looks after the needs of the patients and sees that among other things, soup and chicken are distributed daily at the Sanitarium to the Jewish patients.

Representative James R. Mann, of Illinois, in whose death the House is admitted to have lost one of its picturesque personalities, was of Jewish extraction, a fact which he openly proclaimed on the floor of the House during a debate over the Immigration Amendment two years ago. His mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Dabney Abraham, from whom he inherited one of the keenest intellects that ever enlivened the monotony of Congressional procedure. The late Speaker Clark called him the ablest parliamentarian on the American continent.

Mrs. S. N. Cohen, of New York, Addresses Toronto Women.

Ways and means of strengthening traditional Judaism through the united efforts of Jewish women was the subject of an address given last week by Mrs. S. N. Cohen of New York to a large audience assembled in the Allen Theatre, Bloor Street West.

Mrs. Cohen, who was brought to Toronto by the Women's Auxiliary of one of the Jewish synagogues of the city, represents the Women's League of the United Synagogues of America, which was organized five years ago, and now has 160 orthodox synagogues throughout Canada and the United States affiliated with it. The parent organization was founded 11 years ago, and with it are connected 170 orthodox and conservative Jewish organizations.

The purpose of the "United Synagogues," Mrs. Cohen explained, is to give spiritual guidance to any Jewish community, and to advance educational work among the Jews. It publishes text-books for use in Hebrew schools, and a manual for the teaching of the Bible, and in time called to its aid the services of women, who have greatly aided the cause since their organization into a league five years ago.

As queen of the home, the speaker declared, the Jewish woman may help to restore the Jewish atmosphere, which, in many cases, is fast disappearing through the withdrawal of decorations which are both beautiful and symbolically religious. She may also influence the children by teaching them to love their faith. In connection with this, Mrs. Cohen recommended the Friday-night stories taken from the Bible and Talmud.

The Women's League of United Synagogues as an organization follows the child to college, and attempts to supply there the Jewish atmosphere which he has left behind. Through student houses much may be accomplished, declared the speaker, who then proceeded to describe Jewish student houses in New York, and expressed the hope that Toronto may smoe time have just such an institution.

Dealing with the question of settlements, Mrs. Cohen warned against their influence inasmuch as they supply no Jewish education, and are a centre where Christian teachers who give the Christian interpretation are met. For the protection of Jewish youth, their own people should get in touch with these centres, and start classes there.

"Then there is that heinous evil, the missionary," continued Mrs. Coehn, "and I understand you have not escaped that evil in Toronto." Counteracting this influence, the speaker advocated a Jewish institution in every neighborhood where missionaries are active. "The gentiles do honor more their religion than Jews do, but if the gentiles realized that the Jews revered their religion they would respect them more," said the speaker.

In urging the organization of a Women's League of United Synagogues in Toronto, and in pleading for the preservation of traditional Judaism, Mrs. Cohen remarked that many seemed to consider the Orthodox Chirch quite right for the poor, but when riches came then the only stylish thing to do was to become "reformed." "But what," asked the speaker, "could be more aristocratic, or have a greater cultural value, than our traditional Judaism? Let us keep alive that great flame which first kindled in the heart of Abraham."

The Chairman, Rabbi Seigel, also gave a brief address on the present day of Jewish opportunity, and a fine musical program was given by Miss M. Gold, solo, accompanied by Miss M. Sumberg. Manny Roth, two violin selections, accompanied by Miss R. Rotenberg. Mrs. A. Samuel, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the Goel Tzedek Synagog gave the vote of thanks, seconded by Mrs. I. H. Siegel.

New Jewish Children's Home Opened

Speakers Emphasized Need of Caring for Underprivileged

Emphasizing the fact that those fundamental traits of character that make a man a good Jew also make him a good Canadian and a good citizen, Rabbi B. R. Brickner presided over the formal opening and dedication of the new Jewish orphanage at the corner of Annette and Law Streets, held under the auspices of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto and the Jewish Children's Home, Sunday afternoon.

The ceremony began with the visitors inspecting the beautiful home, formerly the McCormick residence, that had been purchased for $27,000 by the Jewish Community to provide a home for the underprivileged Jewish child. After the inspection the visitors crowded the large double reception rooms to capacity to hear the numerous speakers, the Rabbi Brickner, Rabbi Julius Siegel, Rabbi L. Graubart, Sigmund Samuel, Mrs. M. Greenfarb, M. Kaplan, E. Pullan, Dr. Charles J. Hastings, M.O.H. for Toronto, Mrs. Rafelman and Mrs. Cooper.

Mrs. Greenfarb, president of the Jewish Children's Home, declared that the opening of these new and spacious quarters, after so many years of effort, and working with inadequate facilities, marked the happiest day of her life.

Dr. Hastings drew attention to improvement of health conditions in Toronto, and congratulated Rabbi Brickner on being a public-spirited man with a broad vision along social service lines. Other speakers emphasized the necessity of providing the right sort of environment for underprivileged children of the community, and hoped that it would be a real home and not just an institution.

It was pointed out that the home was practically unfurnished. By furnishing and maintaining a room, a person could have it carry his name. One room had already been furnished by Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Cohen, of Toronto, in memory of their son, Meyer T. Cohen, killed at Passchendaele. Another would be furnished by Mrs. G. Fauman, and still another by Mrs. I. Helpert. The musical program consisted of a vocal number, Miss M. Gold; violin, Manny Roth.

Thomas; social secretary, Mrs. Bennett Isaacs; auditors, the Misses S. Gutson and G. Weiner; social committee, Mrs. H. Rabow, Mrs. Bennett Isaacs and Miss T. Goldhar. Miss Goldhar served tea, assisted by Miss Weiner.

The Sunday School children of the Congregation Anshe Sholom held their annual Chanukah Concert on Sunday, December 17. Miss A. Robinson arranged the programme and trained the children, all of whom deserve great credit for their work, as they had less than two weeks to prepare. Special credit is due Helen Davis, Norman Simon and Harold Fenwick, who received extra parts only the day before the performance. Max Stein made a capable chairman, and special praise is coming to Selma Davis, who acted as accompanist for two choruses, a march, a reading and two vocal solos. Lenore Rubens accompanied the violinist and in the closing exercises.

The programme consisted of addresses by Max Stein and Rabbi Berger, a piano solo by Norman Simon, a violin solo by Lilian Barnett, a vocal solo by Zelda Frank, recitations by Bennie Cohen and Edward Mack, readings by Yetta Davis, several dialogues (two of them the work of Rabbi Berger), several choruses, the Hativah and the National Anthem.

Zionist News

The Provisional Zionist Council met last Monday evening, mostly all members present. As the majority seemed to favor that the Council be composed of representatives of all organizations of the community, it was decided to write to all organizations and ask them to elect delegates to be present at a meeting to be held a week later, and from these representatives officers and executive be elected to form the Zionist Council.

It was also decided to carry on propaganda to acquaint the Jewish citizens with Zionism and the Keren Hayesod in particular, and prepare them for a campaign which would be arranged later. And also to organize the societies of the younger element of the community to act as regular collectors in the Keren Hayesod.

The Hatikvah Club celebrated Chanukah on Sunday afternoon December 17. A banquet was held in the United Hebrew Building, and afterwards a dance. The club's membership is near the seventy mark, and is one of the most popular clubs among the youth of the community.

The Literary and Dramatic Club held their regular meeting on Sunday evening, December 17. After the business had been transacted, a box social was held. Many dainty boxes had been prepared by the lady members of the Club which brought in quite a large sum. Prizes were given to the three best boxes. The first prize was given to Miss Regina Fliegleman, whose box, representing the Hills of Zion, was very beautiful. The second was given to Miss Bloomstein, and the third to Miss Celia Goldberg. After the contents of the boxes were demolished, a dance was held. This Club has a very interesting program, cultural and educational. Most of the members are recently arrived immigrants, and part of their program is Zionistic. They are represented on the newly organized Zionist Council.

Council of Jewish Women

Through the courtesy of Manager Wall of the Lyric Theatre, seventy-five children were his guests on Saturday afternoon. They meet every Saturday evening from 7 to 9 in the Bnai Brith Hall and are taught calisthenics and folk-dancing under a paid tutor.

The Recreation Centre celebrated Chanukah on Saturday evening, December 16, the usual calisthenics and folk-dancing lessons being taken, after which a concert was held from among the girls of the class. Refreshments were served and an enjoyable time spent by all. Mrs. B. Epstein is convenor of the Centre, and to her credit must be given for the entertainment. Rabbi Berger addressed the children, told them the story of Chanakuh and other anecdotes in connection with the festival.

Mr. L. Lyons and Miss Lyons, Aberdeen Ave., left on Sunday evening for Atlantic City, Washington and New York.

Mr. J. A. Kaplansky, Rutherford Avenue, was in Toronto last week, taking part in the ceremonies of the Shriners, Rameses Temple.

Mr. Nat P. Glueck, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was a visitor for the week at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Enoch Hochberg, 204 Catharine Street S. Sunday afternoon was enjoyably spent entertaining at cards in honor of their home-town guest. The Misses Hochberg proved very delightful hostesses. A dainty luncheon and refreshments were served. The prize-winners were Miss Victoria Loveguard of Toronto, and Mr. Aubrey Loveguard.

About eight hundred children, pupils of the Talmud Torah and Sunday School, participated in a magnificent Chanukah celebration on Sunday afternoon at the Rideau Street Synagog. Hundreds of parents were present also, and viewed with delight the portrayal by their children and the speakers of the occasion, of the scenes reminiscent of the ancient wars of the Maccabees. The program was one of the finest of its kind which has yet been given by the local community. The hosts were the board of directors of the Talmud Torah and Sunday School, and the program was arranged by the teachers. The ceremonies were opened by Mr. Lazarus S. Greenberg, of the Sunday School staff, who called upon Mr. N. Metrick, chairman of the board of education of the Talmud Torah, to preside over the gathering. Rabbi J. D. Berger and Mr. C. I. Finn, past chairman of the board, both gave addresses. Master Lionel Katz, on behalf of the students, presented Mr. Finn with a loving cup for his untiring efforts as former chairman of the board, a post he had occupied for many years.

The program consisted of the following items: "The History of Chanukah," in essay form, by Bessie Palef, Lilly Rose, Annie Simonoff and Bessie Applebaum; recitations, Ethel Sadova, Annie Carlofsky, Annie Ofitz, Rose Bowman and Abie Goldman; a Hebrew essay on Chanukah by Harry Berger; Hebrew recitations by Sam Kronick, Harry Goldman and Moses Appel; recitations in Yiddish, by Max Lief. Several songs were rendered by the Sunday School girls. The lighting of the candles was performed by Rev. A. Baker, of the Murray Street congregation.

The teachers in charge included Messrs. L. S. Greenberg, S. Caplan, J. Freedman, B. Shenkman, A. Lieff, and the Misses Pearl Goldfield and L. Levine. The accompaniments were played by Messrs. J. Freedman, L. Lecovin and H. Cohen.

Each of the children was presented with a box of candies on leaving the synagog. These were donated by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Talmud Torah. The ladies in charge included Mesdames L. Leiken, A. J. Freiman, D. Mirsky, B. Goldfield, M. Shenkman, L. Kaminsky, J. D. Berger and A. Brahinsky; and the Misses P. Goldfield, L. Levine and H. Abelson.

On Sunday afternoon the second annual intermediate Y.M.H.A. Chanukah treat was held at the King Edward Avenue Institute. Mr. Ben Edelson, supervisor of the intermediate "Y," was in charge, and opened the entertainment with some remarks on Chanukah. Mr. H. Pearl, the Boys' leader, gave an interesting address on the growth of the intermediate organization. Miss Doris Cohen sang, accompanied by Mr. Herbie Myers, who also recited. A violin solo by Mr. Solly Max, a saxaphone solo by Mr. Lawrence Freiman, and a dissertation on Judas Maccabæus by Mr. Solly Max, completed the program. The music was supplied by the Intermediate Y.M.H.A. six-piece orchestra. Refreshments were served by Mrs. B. Edelson, assisted by the Misses S. Horwitz and F. Zivian.

Previous to this a treat was given for the Junior members under the direction of Mr. Gordon Caplan. The boys were addressed by Messrs. Ben Edelson and B. Pearl. Refreshments were served.

The Y.M.H.A. Literary Circle on Sunday evening presented "Tarbus," a Yiddish play under the direction of Mr. B. Shenkman, assisted by Mr. Morris Goldstein on the violin and Mr. J. Hughes-Johnson at the piano. Mr. H. Hilcop was stage assistant. The program was opened with a rendering by the choir. Various parts were taken by Messrs. M. Lerner, B. Shenkman, S. Zelikowitz and the Misses C. and M. Taflin, G. Hackman and Mrs. Goldstein. The singing of Hatikvah concluded the program.

The annual meeting of the Ottawa Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Society took place on Thursday evening. Mrs. A. J. Freiman was elected president, and the following are the names of the other officers and members of the committees: first vice-president, Mrs. A. H. Coplan; second vice-president, Mrs. A. L. Florence; third vice-president, Mrs. W. Shenkman; treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Marks; secretary, Mrs. M. Davidson; investigating committee, Mrs. W. Abelson, Mrs. R. Kaminsky, and Mrs. L. Davis; sick committee, Mrs. D. Mirsky, Mrs. J. N. Nathanson; wardrobe committee, Mrs. M. Shenkman and Mrs. D. Epstein. A special vote of thanks was passed to Miss Helen Abelson, who has acted as treasurer for the last few months. It was announced that more than $2,400 had been spent by the Society in charitable work during the past year. Deepest sympathy was expressed for the family of the late Mrs. Aaron Rosenthal, who had been president of the Society for the last twenty-one years. Her intense interest in all its work will be sadly missed and sincere regret was voiced in the kindliest terms by Mrs. A. J. Freiman, who had been in office as treasurer for twenty years during Mrs. Rosenthal's regime as president.

In Basketball last week, the Y.M.H.A. Juniors were defeated by Diamond Juniors by 26 to 11, but the Y.M.H.A. Juveniles were winners in a match with the Technical School boys by a score of 39 to 11. The basketball team of the 39th (Jewish) Boy Scout Troop is one of the best scout teams in the city. On Thursday night they kept up their good work by defeating Brantwood Aquatic Club by 27 to 24.

Mrs. R. H. Millar entertained at the tea hour on Sunday in honor of Mrs. Jack Bartelstone. The tea table was presided over by Mrs. B. Mendels and Mrs. Ben Goldfield. Mrs. I. Zivian cut the ices. Assisting in the tea-room were the Misses Pearl Goldfield, Fanny Zivian and Blanche Millar. Amongst those present were Mesdames A. J. Freiman, Alec Lerner, J. N. Nathanson, A. Glickman, Charles Kert, W. Holzman, A. Slone, and Miss Dorothy Freiman. Miss Blanche Millar entertained some young people in the evening.

Mr. B. H. Fogle, secretary of the Ottawa Bnai Brith, accompanied Messrs. M. A. Hillman, C. H. Hartman and H. Levy to Montreal, where all were speakers at a Bnai Brith meeting on Monday evening. Mr. Fogle returned to town on Thursday.

Mrs. Adolph Rosenthal and Miss Elsa Rosenthal, who have been spending several weeks in New York, have returned home.

Mr. Alex Slonemsky, of Chicago, who has been visiting his mother, has returned to his home.

At a meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Perley Home, a resolution of condolence was passed with the relatives of the late Mrs. A. Rosenthal, who was one of the honorary vice-presidents.

Mrs. Jack Bartelstone, of Hanington, Del., is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. R. H. Millar, Stewart Street.

The Sinai League girls held a Chanukah entertainment on Sunday afternoon. Among those present were the Misses Anne Holzman, Lillian Ginsberg, Beck Sugarman, Pauline Gould, Ethel Wener, Clare Kert, Olive Pullan and Anne Freedman. Miss Ginsberg delighted the company with some clever recitations and Miss Gould was heard to great advantage in several vocal selections.

Mr. Myer Fogle spent a few days at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, last week.

The Fascisti leader, Signor Mussolini, who is the virtual dictator of Italy, is said to have demanded the abrogation of the Turkish Treaty of Sevres, as well as the revoking of mandates for countries previously forming part of the Turkish Empire.

The Jewish philanthropist, M. Kadori, of Shanghai, has donated the sum of 125,000 pounds for building houses and Jewish schools in Palestine. The Hebrew High School of Jerusalem will be the first structure to be erected by the Kadori Fund.

The Lost Ten Tribes

After defeating Israel, Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, carried away the majority of the inhabitants of the northern kingdom to Assyria, and placed them in Chalach and Habor, on the stream of Gozan, and in the towns of Media; and in their place he deported a number of foreign tribes to Samaria. Meanwhile, the captive Israelites mingled with the inhabitants of Media, and became lost to sight, and only the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and Levi remained. But as many of the prophets speak of a restoration of the entire people, including the lost Ten Tribes, speculation has always been rife as to their existence, and historians have tried to identify them, now with one people, now with another. If the Ten Tribes have disappeared, the literal fulfillment of the prophecies would be impossible. If they have not disappeared, they must exist to-day under another name. The various attempts at identification that have been made constitute some of the curiosities of literature. In the Apocrypha the Ten Tribes are assumed still to exist as tribes. Tobit is said to be of the tribe of Naphtali. The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs are based upon their supposed continuous existence. In the Fourth Book of Ezra it is stated that the Ten Tribes were carried by Hosea, king in the time of Shalmaneser, to the Euphrates, whence they journeyed for a year and a half to a place called Arzareth, which may well signify, as Dr. Schiller-Szinessy has suggested, Eretz Achereth, "another land" — the "other land" into which the Deuteronomist foretells they would be cast. The additional words, "as at this day," may well be a gloss by a later writer, who knew of their existence, but did not know exactly where they were.

Hagadic tradition makes frequent mention of the lost Ten Tribes and, locates them in fabled regions. They were said to be divided into three groups, one on this side of the Sambatyon river, another on the opposite side, and a third in the neighborhood of Daphne, near Antioch Rabbi Akiba expressed the opinion that the Ten Tribes would never return. Eldad the Danite professed to have discovered their whereabouts in the course of his travels. Dan, Naphtali, Gad and Asher were in Havilah; Zebulun and Reuben in the mountains of Paran; Ephraim and half of Manasseh in South Arabia; Simeon and the other half of Manasseh in the land of the Chazars. By Havilah is perhaps meant Abyssinia. David Reubeni stated that he was related to the king of the tribes of Reuben, situated in Khaibar, in North Africa.

Abraham Farinol believed that the remaining tribes were to be found on the road to Mecca, near the Red Sea. He identified the River Ganges with the Gozan river, and assumed that the Beni-Israel in India were descendants of the Ten Tribes. The theory that the Falashas are the lost Ten Tribes has gained wide credence, and is perhaps due to the confusion between Ethiopia and Farther India which existed in the minds of the ancients. The various stories that circulated in regard to the mythical river Sambatyon always tended to identify the lost tribes with the inhabitants of that region.

Even as late as the nineteenth century a certain Baruch ben Samuel, of Pinsk, was sent to search for the "children of Moses," as they were called by some writers, in Yemen. He traveled fifteen days in the wilderness, and declared that he met Danites feeding flocks of sheep. In 1835, an American physician was appointed by the American Board of Foreign Missions to practice among the Nestorians of Mesopotamia, and he found among them a tradition that they were descendants of the lost Ten Tribes. He considered that the tradition was confirmed by the following facts: They dwelt in the neighborhood to which the original Ten Tribes were deported; their language is a branch of the Aramaic; they still offer sacrifices and first fruits, like the ancient Israelites; they prepare for the Sabbath on the previous evening; and they have Jewish names and features. Grant, who has written on the Ten Tribes, is of opinion that the devil-worshippers in the same region were also descended from the lost tribes, as they observed the rite of circumcision, offered sacrifices and the paschal lamb (on the 24th of Nisan) and abstained from forbidden food.

The Afghans have often been identified with the lost tribes. They declare that Nebuchadnezzar banished them into the mountains of Ghur, whence they maintained correspondence with the Arabian Jews. They still call themselves "Beni-Israel," and they have a markedly Jewish appearance. Their claim to Israelitish descent—which is not to be despised—is allowed by most Mohammedan writers. The modern chiefs of Afghanistan trace their descent to one Kais, who traced his descent through forty-seven generations from Saul.

The Karaites of the Caucasus professed to be descendants of the lost Ten Tribes in order to avoid the accusation that their forebears had been concerned in the execution of Jesus. They pretended to have been settled in the Crimea since the time of Shalmaneser. The plea proved effective with the Russian government, which exempted them from many of the disabilities suffered by ordinary Jews. Then, at various times, the outlying colonies of Jews to be found in China, India and the Sahara were identified by travellers with the lost Ten Tribes. It has even been asserted that the high-class Hindus, including all the Buddhists, are descendants of the Scythians, who were identified with the Ten Tribes. Buddhism, it has been said, is a fraudulent development of the Old Testament doctrines.

The Anglo-Israel theory rests in very large measure on the idea that the Scythians (who appear in history at the same time and in the same place as the Israelites removed by Shalmaneser) were identical with the Ten Tribes. Dan is sometimes identified with Denmark, and at other times with Danaun of Irish tradition. But the chief argument advanced is that the English satisfy the conditions of the Prophets regarding Israel, in so far as they live in a far-off isle, speak in a strange tongue, have colonies throughout the world, and yet worship the true God.

The Ten Tribes have also been located in Japan. It is pointed out that the first king of Japan was Osee, 730 B. C. E., and the last king of Israel was Hosea, who died 722 B. C. E. The Shinto temple is divided into a holy and a most holy place, and the priests wear a linen dress and breeches like the Jewish priests of old. The Masai of East Africa and the Australians have likewise been identified with the tribes of Israel. Nor have the aboriginal inhabitants of Central and South America escaped from the many theories that have been advanced on this subject. According to Manasseh ben Israel, Antonio Montesinos deposed before the Beth Din of Amsterdam that, while traveling in Peru, he had met a number of natives who recited the Shemang in Hebrew and who informed him through an interpreter that they were Israelites descended from Reuben, and that the tribe of Joseph dwelt in the midst of the sea. Jewish customs were to be found among other inhabitants of Central and South America. The Mexicans kept the jubilee, rent their garments in mourning, kept perpetual fire on their altars and observed the custom of Levirate marriage. The Peruvians shared some of these customs. From all this Manasseh ben Israel inferred that the aboriginal inhabitants of America were the lost Ten Tribes. England at that time was, in his view, the only country from which they were excluded, and that was why he was so anxious to secure their readmission. Some authorities have tried to discover traces of the lost tribes among the North American Indians.—London Jewish World.
